六、閱讀測驗 (一題 2 分，共 22 分)

Gaomei Wetlands is a beautiful place in Taichung, Taiwan. Many people go there to watch birds, take pictures of the sunset, and enjoy walking on the wooden bridge. But Gaomei is not just for people — it is also home to many special animals, like the mudskipper.

The mudskipper is a kind of fish, but it is not like most fish. It can live both in water and on land. Mudskippers have strong front fins that help them move and "walk" on the wet mud. They can also breathe through their skin and mouth, but only when their skin is wet. That is why they stay close to the water.

Mudskippers dig holes in the mud to stay cool and safe. They come out to find food, like small bugs or plants. Sometimes, they jump high into the air to scare other mudskippers or to show how strong they are. These funny little fish are very important to the wetland. They help keep the mud soft and full of air, which is good for other animals and plants.

If you visit Gaomei Wetlands, take a closer look at the ground — you might see a mudskipper jumping or crawling by!

 - (D) Mudskippers might die because their skin would dry out.

VOICES OF PEOPLE

Ellen Zimmer

If you want to learn about bringing back extinct animals, reading John Smith's Back from the Dead is a good start. But I have to say I can't agree with everything he says.

From his book, I can see Smith is an advocate of bringing extinct animals back. He says we have lost many animals because we made their living spaces too dirty. He also thinks we must do everything we can to bring them back. However, I don't know how much time and money we would need to make the world a better place for them, and honestly no one knows if they could actually come back.

Smith also says that bringing back extinct animals may be good for us. He talks about an extinct frog that grew tadpoles in its stomach. Some women's babies die before they are born, and Smith believes bringing back the frog may be an answer to the problem. According to him, by studying how the tadpoles grow inside the frog's stomach, we might be able to find new ways to help these women successfully keep their babies. But I don't think things are as easy as Smith thinks. We have spent ten years and millions of dollars on this kind of frog, but all we have got are only a few dead frog eggs. If we can't see a real frog, how can we be sure women will get the help they need?

Dr. Solomon Wang from the Animal Saving Office says the study of bringing back extinct animals is "throwing good money after bad." And he's right. A lot of hard work has been put into this expensive dream, but we haven't seen anything come out of it. So should we still keep going down this road?

extinct 絕種的 tadpole 蝌蚪

44. () What does it mean when someone is an advocate of something?

- (A) They talk a lot but do little about it.
- (B) They believe it is good and should be done.
- (C) They have had some bad experiences with it.
- (D) They are one of the first people who have done it.

45. () What is special about the extinct frog in Smith's book?

- (A) It can live in a dirty living space.
- (B) It might help fix a health problem.
- (C) It eats its babies when it cannot find food.
- (D) It is the first extinct animal that people studied.

46. () Why does Ellen Zimmer use the words from Dr.

Solomon Wang?

- (A) To start a new topic.
- (B) To share a big dream.
- (C) To make her idea clearer.
- (D) To invite people to take action.

47. () What does Ellen Zimmer most likely think about bringing back extinct animals?

- (A) It is possible.
- (B) It is dangerous.
- (C) It is not possible.
- (D) It is not dangerous.

Animals have their special ways to deal with hard times in nature. The superb fairy-wren, one kind of bright-blue bird in Australia, is one example. This year, a ten-year study showed that this small bird has eggs of different sizes in different kinds of weather.

When the weather is hot and dry, there is less food for young superb fairy-wrens, and they die easily. So the mother bird will make larger eggs to help her babies grow stronger inside before they break out of the eggs into the "hungry" world.

However, not all mother birds are able to do this trick. Only those with at least one male child can.

When the weather is "good," the mother will make smaller eggs, and her sons will bring food back for their baby brothers and sisters from the eggs. With her sons' help, the mother can save more energy to make larger eggs when the weather is bad. Isn't this amazing?

- (A) Australia : The Best Place for Birds.
- (B) Mother Bird Fights Weather Changes.
- (C) Larger Mother Birds Have Larger Eggs.
- (D) Family Love : Brothers & Sisters Work Together.

49. () What does this trick mean in the reading?

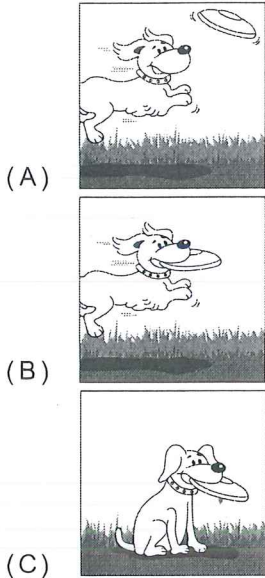

- (A) Having eggs of different sizes.
- (B) Growing stronger inside the egg.
- (C) Saving food for weaker baby birds.
- (D) Helping baby birds break out of the eggs.

50. () What can we learn about superb fairy-wrens from the reading?

- (A) Male birds can usually live for ten years.
- (B) Baby birds grow well in hot, dry weather.
- (C) Young male birds share the job of feeding the baby birds.
- (D) Mother birds make smaller eggs when there is less food outside.
